Comments on the water works election by the State Journal: "The city of Janesv.lle has been making another among its many spasmedic efforts to secure the construction of water works for public-use. The proposition was submitted to a vote of the people on Tuesday last and was beaten by 653 to 304, probably less than half of a full vote. There are few cities which can boast of so nice a division of the population between practicals and impracticals."

There seems to be a general move all along the line this winter against the contiquation of internal taxes except on tobacco, whisky, and beer. The sentiment is so strong in demanding a clean sweep of these taxes except in the articles mentioned, that congress can hardly adjourn without doing something to lighten the burden that internal taxation has so long imposed on the people. We are glad to note that the press of the country, and especially that of Wisconsin, irrespective of party, is in favor of sweeping away in. ternal taxes, saving only those which belong to tobaces, whisky, and beer.

Messrs. Lee & Shepard, of Boston, have this season published eight of their Popular Household Favorites in what they happily term the "Golden Floral" style,-a style which is not only entirely novel in character, but immensely captivating to the eye. Nothing like it has ever before been attempted by the bookpublishers. The purpose of the publishers in bringing out this new style of binding, was to combine the attractions of a favorite illustrated poem with the popular charms of a Christmas card. Not a cheap, inartistic Christmas 'card, by any means, but one of the highest grade and thoroughly refined and tasteful in design, was what was demanded of the artists. Each book has a cover, upon which is wrought the most exquisite iteral designs upon a gold ground and each one of these designs has been chosen so as to be in perfect harmony and symbolism with the spirit of the poem.

The Evening Wisconsin recently made a bitter attack on Senator Angus Cameron, of this state, while charging him with being in favor of wiping out all internal taxes including those on tobacco, whisky, and beer; and said, in concluding a long editorial on the subject:

A person who seems to be so wholly unable to discover the prevailing senti-ment of the state ho pretends to repre-sent, upon a matter of such grave material importance as like entire system of in-ternal taxation, as Mr. Cameron, is not fit to draw the salary of a senator.

The Republican-Sentinel comes to the rescue of Scunter Cameron, and charges the Wisconsin with making a malicious misrepresentation, and gives the language of Senator Cameron in regard to the internal revenue taxes, as follows:

"I believe the whole system will be abolished. Personally I am in favor of retaining the whisky fax and also a reduced tax upon manufactured tobacco. but the sentiment seems to be in favor of abolishing the whole system. Whisky taxed as a wor measure. Stamp taxes have always been detested by the American people, commencing as far back as revolutionary times, and there is a general demand for the wiping out of the whole system, even if it must include whisky. At any rate I think the tobaccotax will be certainly reduced, and all other taxes, except upon whisky, will be certainly repealed."

This puts a far different coloring to the business, much to the satisfaction of the many friends of Sanator Cameron.

The annual report of the state board of supervision of Wisconsin charitable, reformatory and penal institutions, was received by Governor Rusk on Wednesday. The supervisors report that notwithstanding higher prices in many staple articles, than were anticipated when the estimates were made, there is no deficiency in the appropriations, but all the institutions will be carried to the cud of the appropriation years at expenditures well within the sums allotted by the legislature. The net current expenses of the several institutions for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1882, after taking into account the supplies in hand at the beginning and close of the year, and the receipts and transfers from the different departments

A Great Conflagration Raging in England's Capital This Morning.

The Buildings on Several Business Streets Already Reduced to Ashes.

Capt. Shaw's "Model Fire Brigade" Unable to Cope Successfully With the Flames.

Loxbon, Dec. 8.—The premises of Fester, Porter & Co., wholesale hosiery, on Wood street, extending back to Philip lane, are ablaze. The fire threatens to become most serious. Several houses in Philip lane have caught fire, and the street being very narrow, it is difficult for the firemen to approach the burning buildings. The flames have extended on Philip lane south as far as Addie street, LATER.-The fire is extending. The warehouse of Peter Ryland, dealer in flowers, straws, and millinery, one of the largest warshouses on Wood street, is now in flames. The buildings, Nos. 6, 8 and 9 Philip lane, are also on fire. The whole city is illuminated. Only ten engines are yet at the conflagration. The building at Philip lane and Addio street has fallen.

Doc. 8, 5:36 a. m.—The fire is one of the Doe, 8, 5:36 a. m.—The fire is one of the largest that has occurred here in many years. The buildings, on the whole northern side of Addle street are gutted. Ryland's warehouse is destroyed. The outside well of Foster, Porter & Co.'s building has just fadien, setting fire to the houses on the opposite side of Wood street. The fames are steadily marching on. It is exited that Foster, Porter & Co. and P. Ryland are fully insured. The loss must be immense.

and P. Ryland are fully insured. The loss must be immenso.

Owing to the seriousness of the fire, Capt. Shaw, chief of the fire brigade, has called out nearly the whole fire department.

Dec. 8, 8:30.—The fire on the opposite side of Wood street is now extinguished, the flames being confined to the block of buildings bounded by the London wall, Philip lane, Addic street and Wood street, the whole of which block, it is expected, will be destroyed. Silber & Fleming's warehouse, on Wood street, is gutted. The only part of the block now intact is that facing London wall. The buildings fronting on Addle street are still burning floreely.

Lyiand's warehouse, corner London wall and Philiptane is safe at present.

Wood street, Cheapside where the fire started is a narrow lane closely built up with tall brick stores and warefronses, Many of these are of great age, and were originally residences in the days when the merchants of the city proper dwelt above their brainess premises. The entire section is new devoted to the wholesale trade, dealers in millinery, fancy goods, (and dry goods specially affecting Wood street. The whole neighborhood is a mass of tertuous, narrow passages, hardly to be called streets, and fighting fire under such circumstances will furnish Capt. Shaw with all the work he wants.

RUINED.

Demoralization Produced by the Late Oil Panie --- Suicides, Maniacs and Blasted Homes.

BUFFALO, Dec. S .- A special from Olsan reports the mysterious disappearance of Augus Polter and Peter Manners, two men well known in that locality, who were formerly very wealthy. They were ruined during the recent flurries in oil. It is believed they have committed suicide.

John Ford, a heavy] operator at Pittsfield has become a raving maniac through the loss of his fortune, which was swept away in a week. Ford has been taken to an asylum Physician say his reason is entirely dethroned, and there is little hope of his recovery. The disastrous results of the great oil panic are becoming more apparent daily. Hundreds of persons have been utterly ruined or seriously crippled. The demoralization wrought in western New York and north Pennsylvania equals that experienced by Jay Cooke & Co's failure. It is estimated that between $2,000,000 and $5,000,000 have been lost during the craze. The greater portion of the profits arising from the movement is presumed to have gone into the coffers of the Standard Oil and United Pipe Line companies. In some places where the reaction has set in business is paralyzed, Merchants of hitherto good standing have been backrupted and compelled to close their establishments, while people generally are put to wife' ends to obtain funds to liquidate their bills, so little money is in circulation. Physician say his reason is entirely de-

A THEATRE BURNED.

The Alhambra Royal at London Des-troyed by Fire.

London, Dec. 8.-The Albambra Theatre Royal was destroyed by fire, the flames breaking out fifteen minutes after the close of the performance. The fire started in the saleon of the theatre and spread with such marvelous rapidity that it was impossible to save anything from the burning building. The Alhambra Royal was situated in Loicestor squarebra Royal was situated in Loicestor square and was one of the finost, largest and most popular theatres in London, laving a scating capacity of about six thousand. The performance, which had just closed, was that of the opera "The Merry War," Three hundred prople are threwn out of employment. Had the fire occurred half an hour earlier the loss of life would have been frightful. The damage to the surrounding property is great. All dresses, properties, scenery, music and instruments for the Christinas production at the theatre are destroyed. Not insured. Eight houses situated back of the Allambra theatre burned. Total loss by the fire, £150,000. burned. Total loss by the fire, £150,000.

The Grave-Robbers.

Рипланента, Dec. 8.—An indignation meeting of colored people was held yesterday, and a resolution adopted giving heartfelt thanks to the proprietor and attaches of Tho Press for the arrest and imprisonment of the grave-robbers. When a trustee of the Lebanon cemetery named Burton appeared on the platform there was great excitement. Several razors and revolvers were drawn, and nearly everybody shouted for vengennee, white Bishop Campbell and other clergymer invoked the peace. The peace-makers were successful, but the meeting at once adjourned. snesosiful, but the meeting at once adjourned. The announcement was made that subscriptions to prosecute the ghouls would be received at The Press office. Thirty graves were opened yesforday. From about half of them the bodies had been stolen. The health department will not allow more graves to be opened until it is known whether the person died from a contagious disease.

Justice to Mrs. Langtry.

New York, Dec. 8.—The gossip growing out of the separation of Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Labouchere is still the talk of the town. The sober-sensed people say that there is no foundation for the scandal-that Mrs. Langtry has not been out of sight of some one of her fominine retione from the moment she reached | minute. The board asks for special appropria-

our shores; that these bot-headed youths who our shores; that these bot-headed youths who have been dining with her early in the evening, nor any one clse, ever saw her after theatre hours, and that the whole business is absurd. Those who live in the 'hotel with her say that there has positively been nothing that could be twisted into a suspicious act on her part, and that never had a woman surrounded herself with more safeguards and more precautions to avoid oven the lappearance of evil than has she.

An evening newspaper says: The worst that is said of young Mr. Gebbart, the dashing young stock broker whom Mrs. Labouchere so emphatically disapproves of, is that he keeps a stable of race-horses; is more familiar with the betting-book than with the spelling-book; since he addressed Mrs. Langtry as "My Dear Friend," and begged her acceptance of a basked of "frut;" that he was a year ago the affianced of Miss Leonic Jerome, but is so no longer; and that he made and won a bet of $5,000 that he would "fascinate" the English beauty on her arrival here, although he had never seen her and knew of no means of becoming acquainted with her.

THE DAIRY.

Yesterday's Proceedings in the Convention at Milwaukee.

The value of Good Hay and Straw in Butter-Making.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 8-The National Butter, Cheese, and Egg association reassembled at theExposition building restorday forenoon with a fairattendence of delegates. Secontary Little introduced P. Kuleshoff, connected with the Russian department of agriculture, who is making a tour of the United States for the purpose of investigating the American system of agriculture. Mr. Kulcshoff was invited to a seat on the platform.

Jonathan Perriam, of Illinois, addressed the convention on the subject of hay and grass. The speaker dwelt largely upon the subject of butter flavoring, which he claimed was due to the grass upon which cows fed. He thought the time would come when butter would be flavored artificially, the same as other articles used on the table. The great reputation of Pennsylvania butter for fine flavor was due to the grasses of that state containing benzele acid. Western butter could be made with the same flavor if benzele acid could be made fine enough, which is impossible. There is no article in the world which is so sensitive to odors as butter. If roses grew near a cellar where butter is kept, that butter will be imbred with the flavor of the rose.

Mr. Kuleshoff them addressed the convention, and expressed gratification on meeting the dairymen of America in the presence of such a magnificant display of their products.

Mr. Scaman, followed with a paper on butter flavor and coloring. He claimed that different localities produced different flavored butter, owing to the difference in the grass grown. He condemned the use of butter coloring. flavored artificially, the same as other articles grown. He condomned the use of butter coloring.

§ Mr. Seymour, of New York, claimed that American choose makers invariably hurried the manufacture in order to get the product to market. He said the cheese consumption of the United States was a disgrace, because of the great amount of poor cheese made. Ira Boatello, c'St. Louis, followed in the same strain, daraing that if good cheese were made people wild out it.

Mr. Burrell, of Little Falls, N. Y., spoke at some length on the same subject. In showing the magnitude of the cheese interests of the United States he stated that the total value of the annual product fluirty years ago amounted to but $450,000,000, while at present the total value of the annual product reaches the enormous sum of $45,000,000. His address contained many facts and figures of interest to dairymon.

The secretary stated that the bancact to p.

The committee on nomination recommended John J. McDonald, of Phila lelphia, for president, and R. M. Littler, of lowa, for secretary and trensurer for the ensuing year, and both were ununimously elected. The nomination for vice-presidents will be amounced to-day. A resolution of thanks to the retiring president, Austin Belkinap, of Boston, was adopted.

The difference between weights on shipment and after receipt was brought up by Mr. Willer, of Now Yora, and warnly discussed. Liberal allowance of weights in making shipments was tacitly agreed upon as the only romedy. More resolutions of, thanks Tollowed, and the convention adjourned until to-day.

The End of the Devoy Case. NEW YORK, Dec. 8 .-- The Belmont-Devoy li-

sel case came to an old to-day by the disagreement of the jury. The twelve men, after spending the night in an unsuccessful attempt speaking the night in an unsuccessful attempt to agree, came into court this morning and announced that an agreement was unpossible, and they were accordingly discharged. Mr. Beach moved that the order committing Devoy for contempt be wearded. Judge Cowing granted the order, saying that he had done what was accessary to preserve the dignity of the court. Br. Devcy left, accompanied by a number of his friends, who congratulated him upon the happy ontcome of his troubles. The jury stood eight for conviction and four for acquittal.

Transportation of Coffee. NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The dealers in roasted coffee are complaining of the action of western railway lines in changing the classification of rousted coffee packed in wooden cases from the fourth to the third class of tariff rates, thereby adding to the cost of transportation from 10 to 50 per cent, over that of green cortee, which is put up in linen bags. A well known reacting firm in this city have addressed a circular to the generals freight agents of transportation lines, in which they ask to have the reasted coffee placed on the same feeting as green coffee.

The Democratic Majority. WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 .- Edward McPherson, clark of the house, has been engaged for sevoral days in making the list of members of the next house. He said to-day that he had comploted the roll as far as he was able, and that Democrats have a majority of sixty over the combined Greenbackers, Independents, and hepublicans. He has asked for additional information concerning the vota in several closely-contested districts, and believes the thial showing will somewhat further reduce the Democratic majority. the Democratic majority.

A Large Payment.

New York, Dec. S.-J. & W. Seligman will pay to-morrow to the United States Trust company $10,000,000, the balance due by the Company strococco, the balance due by the Panama Rail-road company's stock. This is one of the largest single payments that has been made in the street. The Messre, Seligman think that the money market will not be disturbed by this payment. Very little exchange remains to be sold on this account.

Cockerill ... Sinyback. Sr. Louis, Dec. 8.—John A. Cockerill issues a card to the public, alleging that the suit for $5,000 brought by the widow of Col. Slayback was inspired by the Knapps, who own The Republican and are determined to crush him.

Further Evidence by Medical Exports as to the Responsibility of Theresa

The Humane Ambition of Mrs. W. P. Black.

Testimony of the Murdered Man's Mother.

CHICAGO, Dag. 8 In the Sturla case Dr. Anton Lagurio, Dr. Daniel R. Brower and Dr. H. M. Lyman testified that the defendant was insanc. "Mrs. W. P. Black," called Mr. Trude, and the wife of the late. Democratic candidate for congress in the Third district took the stand. She had called frequently at the jail to see the defendant, and there had been no levees or solrees there to her knowledge. The demeanor soirces there to her knowledge. The demeaner of the defendant had always been womanly, modest, and gentle. Her interest and that of other ladies had been aroused by the sorrowful history of Theresa, and her personal interest had been very great.

"Are you the lady," asked Mr. Trude, "who, the court and jury being willing, desires to take cherge of the future of this defendant."

Mr. Mills at once objected, and the question was not answered.

On cross-examination, Mrs. Black said that of her own knowledge she could not of course, say whe or bow many had called at the jult to see Theresa, and on re-direct she said that a very dear friend of hers had become insone from the same disease—dysmennorhea—that Theresa suffered from.

"That is all."

The usual recess was then taken until?

This afternoon Mr. Mills, in reply to Mr. Trude's questions, said that he had had interviews with his own winesses, but hadn't confined then to places outside the court room. Mr. Trude was then sworn, and made a statement as to he interviews with Thoresa, the only one of any length being that in which he was urging her to take the witness-stand. An altachment was then issued for a bey named George Taylor, who was not present, and Mr. Trude said he would close when the boy has tostified.

was urging her to take the witness-stand. An altachment was then issued for a bey named George Taylor, who was not present, and Mr. Trons said he would close when the boy has tostified.

After the examination of three incortant witnesses, the defense rested their cased. The prosecution in rebultal called Mrs. Stiles, the mether of the murdered man. Her testimony in substance was as follows.

"I first saw Theresa Sturia, the defendant, on the 2th of August, 1881. That was the day before the death of my husband. My lusband was very ill then—dying, as I supposed, and I had held myself in readiness on Wabash avenue; rang the bell, and the defendant appeared. I would like to state here as the reason why I did not come to my husband sooner, that I had said to him: "If you ever go to that flat where that woman is. I will never be your wife again," and I did not come until they telegraphed to me to come. I met her at the door, and asked if my husband, Mr. Stiles, was shere. I had determined not to allow this woman to talk to me and to keep her at a distance. She appeared very shability attired, and led me to my husband, and I saw that he was in a deing condition. This woman disappeared. She went about the losuse and I suppose in order to show off her voice, she was singing. She was there when Dr. Ingais came, and afterward went out for some medicine. She seemed to exhibit a little timbitity. She didn't seem to want to meet me, at the same time my son came down and asked me by Ingais came. He proseribed some drugs for my Insband; this woman won't cut and got the drugs, and then won't into the kitchen to prepare him some drugs for my Insband; this woman won't cut and got the drugs, and then won't into the kitchen to prepare him some drugs for my Insband; this woman won't cut and got the drugs and sat down. #### STAR-ROUTE TRIAL.

The Defendants Swear They Cannot Have a Fair Trial.

Washington, Dec. 8.—In the supreme court of the district, criminal term, all the jurous summoned being in attendance, the district attorney announced that the government was ready to proceed in the case of the United States against Thomas J. Brady and others. Col. Ingersoll submitted a motion for the continuance of the case, on the ground of the illness of Stephen W. Dorsey, Judge Wylie overruled the motion. Col. Ingersoll excepted to the ruling, and asked time to go to his client's room and procure his signature to a paper, for which purpose a recess was taken.

Mr. Wilson read a long affidavit, swarn to and signed by all the defendants, setting out that they cannot safely go to trial at the present term, because of the note of the officers of the government in endeavoring to influence opinion against them, and to intimidate and coerce witnosses, jurors fand officers of the court, reciting the arrest of Dickson, the removal from office of Henry, Ainger, et al., for the avowed reason that they were in sympathy with the defendants, and expressing the belief that in the selection of talesmen influence projudicial to the defendants were set at work, and that the appointment of Mc-Michael as marshal was part of that selome. The allidavits also claim that Judge Wylie is so biased and prejudiced against the defendant, that he cannot fairly and impartially administer the law, and conclude by requesting a continuance of the case to the uext term.

Judge Wylie said that the paper was un insult to the court.

Mr. Bliss compared the proceedings with to the ruling, and asked time to go to his clisuit to the court.

Mr. Bliss compared the proceedings with Mr. Bliss compared the proceedings with the Tweed trial.

Col. Ingersell disclaimed any intention to offer insult, whereupon Judge Wylie said:

"Well, you may file the paper, but I shall hear no mere about it."

The motion fer a continuance of the case on account of Dorsey's illness was refused, and the motion by Mr. Wilson, calling for a bill of particulars was overruled.

CONGRESS.

Proceedings in the Senate and House Yesterday. SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Doc. 8.-In the senate vesterday Mr. Beek called up his resolution for the investigation into the political assessments during the last campaign, and said that, having but little personal knowledge on the subject, and thinking a discussion in advance of the ascertainment of facts unprodutable, he would content himself at present with asking a vote on the resolution.

Mr. Hale thought that if the conduct of the last campaign was to be investigated by the senato, the investigation ought to extend to both parties. Therefore he offered a substitute, setting forth the names of the members of the setting forth the manner of the members of the congressional executive committees of both parties, reciting the allegations that the Democratic committee had levied contributions on the liquor dealers, brewers and other associations, and directing the committee on the judiciary to investigate these charges as well as those made against the Republican committee.

Mr. Beck said the substitute proposed to investigate matters over which congress has no control, and was evidently intended to ombarcontrol, and was evidently intended to embar-rass the logitimate investigation proposed in the original resolution.

After a brief discussion the substitute was ordered printed, and, at the suggestion of Mr. Harris the matter went over.

At 2 o'clock the senate resumed considera-tion of the bankruptcy bills.

Mr. Carland spoke in advocacy of the bill as prepared by the judiciary committee, and then some committee amendments reported by Mr. Ingalls were agreed to.

The Pittsburg Iron Men Take a Calm View of the Situation, and Sec Nothing to Cause Uneasiness.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 8.—The Western Iron and Steel association has been in session considering the recent flurry in the steel market and the report of the tariff commission. On the tariff report the members were nearly unanimous in the opinion that the published revision of the tariff lists was a complete work, and ought to satisfy business men generally. The steel men present expressed dissatisfaction at the treatment to which their claims had been subjected by the tariff commissioners, but they did not say that any steps would be taken by them to fight the $18 duty. When pushed by the iron men for something definite on the subject, they roplied that they believed that the less said about the matter the better, until they held a meeting and decided definitely they be'd a meeting and decided definitely upon a course of action. Some of the largest producers of steel in the city were not present. A decision on the question of the tariff report was arrived at.

When the chair announced that the body would proceed to the consideration of the business for which it was called, namely the present condition of the iron and steel trade, but one opinion was expressed upon the recent thurry in the market. It was pronounced a simple scare, with no foundation in fact. Instances were cited in proof of the position assumed which, in the main, wont to show that orders for 250,000 tone of rails had been placed at fair figures since Scranton cut the bottom out of prices by quoting them at $42, dolivered in Chicago.

Further conversation developed the fact that the members of the association expected that the members of the association expected winter orders to be plenty, at good running rates. No discussion was indulged in relative to the reduction of the steel-worker's scale, and it is considered just how as a purely economic measure concerning the steel men exclusively and not a proper embed. For the and the considered just now as a purely economic measure concerning the steel men exclusively, and not a proper subject for the doliberations of the association generally. The result of the meeting was an understanding that a mutual effort would be made by the manufacturers to sustain present card rates. The belief was generally expressed that prices must advance rather than fall off as the season progressed.

AN IRATE HUSBAND,

the Alleged Seducer of His Wife. Sr. Louis, Dec. S.-In Barr & Co.'s, the largest retail dry-goods establishment in St. Louis, Joseph B. Cull, a salesman for the wholesale dry-goods house of Leabrie & Co. tried to kill Thomas Carpening yesterday, also a dry-goods salesman, and in the employ of Nugent & Co. The weapon used was a revolver, the bulist from which missed Carpening and grazed the head of a young man named William Johnson. Then it lodged in the ceiling. Cull was arrested and the charge of assault with intent to kill entered against him. Carpening, speaking of the affair, said: "I was standing in our store (Nugent's), when Cull came up and insisted that I should accompany him to Barr's to accuse his wife to her face of having sat in a young man's lap. I refused to do so, saying that I could not leave my work, and he then drew a revolver and, pointing it at me, told me that he would kill me if I redo so, saying that I could not leave my work, and he then drow a revolver and, pointing it at me, told me that he would kill me if I refused to accompany him. I wont, of course, and when I got into Earr's he told me to march down stairs to the basement, where his wife was employed. I refused, and called for assistance. Baffled in his purpose, he, after exchanging a few words with one of the clerke, again drow his pistol and pointed it at my head. I grasped lds hand, and as I did so the pistol was discharged and the ball missed me, but ithis a clerk named Johnson. The man was about to fire again, but Mr. Williams caught him from behind by the shoulders and, dinging him against the counter and bales of goods, wrested the weapon from his hand and thereby saved my life."

In regard to the charge made against him of having accused Cull's wite of taking literties with young men, Carpening denies that he said anything that could reduce on the lady in any way. He says on the contrary, that she is a hard-working, incustrious and virtnous woman, and a true wite. Mrs. Cull says there has been trouble between her and her husband for some time. She met the latter in his cell and, in her interview with him, upbraided him for not standing by her in a menly way, as a husband ought when his wife is wrongfully accused. She closed by saying: "If you had been the man you ought to have been, you would have made Tom take back what he said, but you encouraged him in it." The wife turned several limes to go away, but returned and asked about a lawyer and his supper, and having been promised by the sergeant that later in the day she should have an opportunity to see her husband, she went away. After his wife had gone, Cull said that Carpening's shandor had brooded on his mind, and that yesterday morning he went up to Nugent's and insisted that Carpening should come down to Mrs. Cull, at Bart's, and own up that he had fied. Carpening should continued: "I shot at him, and then Cull tool the fewer ments ago, when they were keeping a priva

American Bog Products in Germany New York, Dec. 8 .- Speaking of the proposed enactment of the German bundesrath, prohibiting the importation of American pork and hog products, H. O. Armour, of Armour, Plankinion & Co., says: "I do not think it will make any very material difference in the market whether that law is passed or not, Comparatively little of our hog products are exported to Germany. Then we have no surplue. It is not as it was ten years ago, when we raised many more hogs than we could consume. Now we can eat all our own hogs. Last year, for instance, the whole amount of hogs exported from this country did not exceed 10 per cent of the crop raised. We consumed the other 50 per cent at home."

"What do you think is the reason of the law?"

law?"

"It is a retaliatory law. If it is passed it "It is a retaliatory law. If it is passed it will not be done because American pork is discussed, but because, like the French, the Germans want reciprocity of trade."

"What do you know about the custom of taking American pork to England, rebranding it there, and then sending it on to France as English pork."

"I would rather not answer that question. I do not live in England and Leannor know."

"I would rather not answer that question. I do not live in England, and I cannot know what is going on there. But I will say this much, that it will require a mighty charp law to circumvent the inventive genus of commercial use."

WILLIAM E. ENGLISH.

volved in a Difficulty with a Wid-

The Young Indiana Statesman In-Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 8.—To-day Elizaboth Williams bogan bastardy proceedings against William E. English, late candidate for congress in this district, and son of Hon. W. H. English. The papers were served, and Mr. English gave bond for his appearance on the 16th inst. The story told by the woman is to the effect that she was seduced on the stage of Mr. English's theatre about two months ago, and that she is now pregnant. Mr. English says that he has had nothing to do with the weman further than to give her a few dollars out of charity some weeks ago, and denounces the matter as a blackmailing scheme. Last night an arrangement of some kind was made by which the suit was withdrawn, but both parties decline to make pullie the particulars. There is little probabilities of ib being pressed. The complainant is a widow with one child, and but little is known of her here. English says that about six weeks ago she came to him with a pinful story that ther furniture was mortgaged, and she would lose it unless she had $5. He gave her the money, and the same day she to d the same story to his father, but he refused to give her any assistance. Some time afterward she again came to him with a story that she was almost starving, and he gave her $2, and since then he had heard nothing of her until the suit was filed. The matter has been kept very quiet here, the local papers disarrediting the story and refusing to print it. When generally known it will create much comment, on account of Mr. English's social and political position. and denounces the matter as a blackmailing position.

DAME AUTUMN.

DAME AUTUMN.

Summer is dead; too soon her radiant shape Beneath a humid pall of leaves is laid; Too soon is tied the swallow, to escape The biting wind, and Winter's cruel shado.

Summer is dead; the weeping forest tre:
Repeats the cry amid its falling leaves;
Past is the cheerful hum of laden bee,
Vanished the mellow glory of the sheaves.

Now do grim shadows usher in the night, That follows fast upon the shortened day; More boldly dota the night-bird wing her flight, And creak deliance to the moon's wan ray. Now doth the peasant, hastening saily home, Trembling, recall some hair-forgetter tale; How in the chill of evening, elf and gnome, Sporting, hold revel high on hill and dule.

Up from the deep moist begoin of the carth, Autumn arising shakes for dewy hair, And leaves the sedgy marshes of her birth To sear aloft; a creature wondrous fair!

But pale and sad; one slender hand uphold, Above her head a veil's transfucent sheen, That falling, wraps within its silv'ry folds Her limbs, whose charm, thus hidden, yet is

A we'rd light flickers faintly round her head. And sparkles on the threed gossamer Of delicate wings, that to the breeze outspread support her flight, yet scarcely seem to stir Yet tears are in her eyes, ah! mournful tears, A shadow dime her pale brow as of palm; Telling of faded hopes in vanished years, Of mirth and Joys that may not come again.

So have I heard her from her couch arise.

When night is full of murmurs, and the sound
Of the chill air that rustles as she flies,
And the dead twigs that crackle to the ground.

And thusshe floateth, brushing from the bough The russet leaves that sadly linger there: And wroathes them into chaplets for her brow, Or plucks the drooping flowerets for her hair. And while the pattering rain-drops on the grass Pall with a ceaseless monotone, the night Enwraps her, and the stars behold her pass Through the bleak durkness in her silent Hight,

CHAPTER I. "Sweetheart!" "My love!"

"Why do you tremble?" "I rom fear."

"Pet, fear not! I have braved the lion's rage a thousand times, yet I have not a sear. The thousand and first time will leave me as I am now." And Signor Foscarelli, the great lion-tamer, placed his arm around the girl's waist. I do not know that it is strange a lion-tamer should make love in a manner just like any one else. Be that as it may, Signer Foscarelli drew the girl that he loved toward him, and kissed her just as any other lover might have

"And, as I have escaped a thousand times," he added, "I take it for granted that I can venture as many more times, and still not be mained or slain." The woman that Signor Foscarelli loved spoke with a tremor in her voice. "I cannot view it so," she said.

"Your profession seems to me like drawing at a lottery. There are many blanks, but somewhere in the wheel there is a fatal number. You have performed a thousand times. As yet you have not drawn the fatal number, yet your chances of doing so are fearfully increased; there may be but one more ticket in the wheel; there may be a hundred. Grant that there is a thousand. A thousand against a thousand is one against one. Now do you not see how strong the possibility of that fatal num-ber being near you is:"

Signor Foscarelli coughed and stammered. The argument that had been The argument that had been offered was conclusive. He could not controvert it. But when the woman ho loved burst into tears he found his

"Let me see," interrupted Signor Foscarelli, "I think with what I can save this year that I will be worth ten thousand dollars at the end of it. With that we can try layer in a cattern with that we can try love in a cottage, my pet."

"And whether we are worth it or not we can," cried the woman Signor Fos-carelli loved. "There are a thousand vocations for you, in none of which you need peril your life. Refuse me that promise, I repeat, my darling, and you break my heart."

"I promise," said Signor Foscarolli. gravely. Yes, a lion-tamor makes love like other people.

were very quiet, and unlighted save by an occasional lamp at a corner, the rays of which would only extend for a short distance. Not long before, however, the streets had echoed to the tread of a multitude of people for "Lipman's Grand Eastern (upon second thought I beg to state that "Oriental" was the word used instead of Eastern) Equescuricculum" had given a performance that evening. But all the multitude had vanished, and now John Foster's tread was the only sound that disturbed the quiet of the street. The other performers had preceded him to their hotel, but ne, for some leason, had lingered where the pavilion, that had fallen as by the hand of magic, had stood. John Foster had remained for a time by the ring of sawdust that on the morrow would be all that was left to remind the boys thronging around it that Lipman's G. E. O. had come and gone, and then started to walk to his

As he was walking hastily along, and while he was near a lamp-post, he met a man, a stranger to him. The man stopped square before him.
"Are you Signor Foscarelli?"

quired.
"I am sometimes known by that title." John Foster said.
"Yes," said the stranger. "Hum! I have been to your hotel inquiring for you. I was told that you had not yot come. I started in this direction, knowing that I would meet you. I have just a few words to say to you." He paused for a moment, and then added: "My name is Peter Gwyn, of the State of New York, and I am of sound mind." "I do not doubt it, Mr. Gwyn," said

John Foster. Again there was a moment's pause, broken by the lion-tamer Mr. Gwyn, pray proceed."

"Hum, yes," said the stranger. Signor Foscarelli, you are a brave man. You see, I saw you perform to-night."

"Is that all you wish to say" said John Foster, coolly.
"No, I repeat, Signor Foscarelli, you are a braye man, but you will be killed, and I will see your death. I feel that I will. I do not feel that I can be deceived in my sensations. Mark my prophecy. I have nothing against you, Signor Foscarelli, but if you are to be killed by your lions I desire to see it. Pray don't think hard of me. If it is to be there will be no harm in my secing it."

The man vanished in the darkness.

To John Foster there came in his dreams that night a face with dark eyes, thin lips and white teeth, the face of the stranger, and a voice rang in his cars, saying:
"You will be killed, and I will see your death."

CHAPTER III. It was a mouth later. During the passing month John Foster had periled his life half a hundred times, coming out unscathed.

A tremendous audience was gathered in the pavilion of Lipman's Oriental Equescurriculum, drawn there principally by the fame of Signor Foscarelli's performance. The jests of the clown, the vaulting of the aerobat, the contortions of the boneless man, the antice of the trick horse, all became things of the past for that occasion. Last of all was to come the entrance of the liontamer into the cage of monsters.

Signor Foscarelli appeared. He bowed to the audience, smiled, and then entered the place where no other man of all that throng could have gone, and lived to tell of his daring.

This nineteenth century boasts of its civilization. But some way or other I or crouched. More and more fiercely am reminded of the gladiatorial days of John Foster struck. Rome as I write of John Foster. blood of the sacrifice seems as sweet to the people now as it was then. Otem-pora! Omores!

The man went through with his performance successfully, the audience hanging breathlessly upon his actions. His beasts obeyed him as well as usual. gnor Foscarelli, as I have said, went through his performance successfully; he was about ready to retire from the suddenly there was a suppressed roar. In an instant the man saw his peril. The eyes of his largest animal were lashing the and his regest animal were flashing fire, and his great red tongue had dropped out. There was a spring. and simultaneously a cry of fear from the audience. But the lion-tamer was not slain. He had kept his presence of mind, and his motions were quicker than those of the angry beast. The great iron door of the cage closed with a crash between im and the lion, and he was safe. Still, he had left his sleeve inside, and there was an ugly scratch on his arm—an ugly scratch, no more.

John Foster bowed and smiled again. Then in a moment his tall, athletic figure had disappeared from the sight of the multitude.

His escape had occurred during the His escape had occurred during the afternoon performance. That evening, after he had eaten his supper, he came out of the dining-room into the office of the hotel. Standing by the desk of the clerk was the man with dark eyes, closely-shaven face, white teeth, and thin lips. John Foster recognized him immediately. "Good-evening, Signor Foscarelli," he said.

he said. "Good-evening," said John Foster, coldly. "I understand that you have had a narrow escape," said Mr. Peter Gwyn. "Now, if I had been in the pavilion this afternoon, you would have been killed, no doubt. I am to be in at the death, however, so you were spared. Are you aware that I have seen you perform several times during the last month? You see, I am a man of means, and it's my whim to follow you around in this way."

"I don't know anything about your movements, sir," said John Foster, angrily. "Neither do I care to. You are too cold-blooded to suit me."
"I shall see you perform again too got "said Mr. Poter Gwen, display-aight," said Mr. Peter Gwyn, displaying no heat whatever.

John Foster turned on his heel, and solutions of the feet of the mean walked away. His countenance betrayed nothing, but he felt his heart sink. He had expected at any rate that the lions would be harder to manage than usual. He felt that the presence of this man would unnerve him. Before his vision was the fere of the west. fore his vision rose the face of the wom-an he loved, and she was weeping. Was his doom staring him in the face? The thought suggested itself to him that he might refuse to appear. But he shut his teeth hard, and drove it away.

"I am no coward, Mr. Peter Gwyn," he muttered, as though speaking to the man who seemed to be his foe. "Your silly twaddle shall not frighten me from

But that very thought was proof that some reservoir was an ected. And he, brave man as ever lived, was strangely so. However, for some reason, why, John Foster never knew, Peter Gwyn was not present that night, and the animals were as docile and obedient as he had ever same instant there was a flash and a sharp, quick report. The remaining lions reared in wild rage, but Jim-jam fell in the agonies of death. Again, however, the iron door closed between John Foster and danger. He had been prepared, and had saved himself.

Yet afterward the fact was realized by him that had the lion sprung with as little warning as previously, he must have been slain. Circumstances have favored him, and he had made two narrow escapes.

As John Foster left the pavilion he encountered Peter Gwyn. "Hum, Signor Foscarelli," said that person, his white teeth glowing between his thin line "I intended to be been his thin lips, "I intended to be here sooner, but I was delayed. You have had another".

"Thank Heaven that you were," eried John Foster. "Fiend, devil, you. need not hunt me to the death."

Probably John Foster would not have said so much, had he not been excited by his encounter.

CHAPTER V. The lion-tamer knew that Mr. Peter Gwyn was in the audience. He had seen the man enter, as it chanced, and it had seemed to him then an ominous But there would be no failure to fill out the programme of the evening on that account.

Mr. Peter Gwyn got a seat as close to the cage of performing lions as possible, and, while the clown jested, the acrobat tumbled, and the knights of the sawdust galloped around, he sat still, evidently uninterested. At last, however, the performance of the evening was at hand. There was a femiliar to the same than the flourish of the orchestra, some lively strains, and then all was silent as the watch of death. John Foster was in the lion's cage.

The proprietor of the "Grand Orient" al Equescurriculum" had considered himself especially lucky that on the very day succeeding that on which "Emperor Nero" perished he had received notice from his agent in New York of the received. York of the reception of a lion of unusual strength and size. He ordered the animal sent to him immediately. John Foster had been trainhe had been performing for one. He was known to the gaping crowds as "Cessar the Conqueror;" to John Foster as "Jim-jam."

To the lion-tamer, as he entered that cage of dangerous beasts, all things about him seemed unreal. The bright blaze of the lamps might be the weird light of an enchanted world, so unreal did it appear; the lions, huge monsters; Mr. Peter Gwyn, Satan himself.
This part of my story is soon told.

John Foster was in no mood to handle lions. From the very first the tide was against him. The latest addition became unruly. John Foster's state of apathy continued. Once more the spring of the lion was made. This time John Foster fell through the door held open for his leap, and rolled underneath the eage. It was not closed quickly enough, and the huge form of the heast of prey forced itself through.

Meantime, Mr. Peter Gwyn had moved closer to the cage. At the mo-ment of the catastrophe he was near at hand, looking in with eager eyes. With ment of the catastrophe he was near at land, looking in with eager eyes. With a roar, the raging beast sprang upon him.

John Foster became free from his apathetic condition. He leaped to his feet, and seized a whip from the hand of a paralyzed attendant close at hand. and seized a wind from the name of a paralyzed attendant close at hand. With lierce courage he attacked the lion. He struck terrific blows on the head of the beast. Caesar the Conquer-

Well, there are inexplicable things all around us. In two minutes Casar was conquered and caged. I cannot explain how, nor why the indomitable will of John Foster tamed a monster whose tongue was wet with blood.

And Peter Gwyn was dead. The most singular part of my story, perhaps, is to come. Mr. Peter Gwyn left a will, and in that will he bequeathed all his wenth, he having no known relatives, to Signor Foscarelli, the great liontamer, provided he should survive him.

John Foster went no more into deadly peril. If dare say he and the woman whom he loved are as happy as the majority of such mortals.—P. W. Morris, in Ballon's Monthly.

this city was realized, and drew forth much praise and but little condemnation the machine and connections of the wires. were overlooked and the lights were not as perfect as they will be when all is line of defense in the cause. I approach thoroughly adjusted. As has already been stated in the Gazette, the dynamo, from which the electric light is generated, is located at the Janesville machine company's works, who furnish the motive of murder, the taking of human life; but, power. There are ten lights attached to this machine, one of which is located in the wood shop of the Janesville Machine company; two at the C. O. D. store (one of which is in the street); two in McKev's Evenson; one in the New York drugstore of E. B. Heimstreet; one in the clothing store of M. O. Smith & Son; one in Palmer & Stevens' drugstore; and one in W. T. Vankirk's grocery store, making six lights on the west side and four on the east side of the river. The illumination in these business places was brilliant, each light being of the capacity of 2,000 candles. Perhaps the most brillians effects were produced in the drugstores. The store of Mr. E. B. Heimstreet preand the store was "brighter than day." The reflection of the light upon the different colored drugs, bottles and toilet articles displayed in the show cases, presented a beautiful sight indeed, and was greatly admired by the many visitors during the evening. M. C. Smith & Son's clothing house, too, was the scene of a beautiful display under the influence leather strap around its neck, got through | of the new light, their rich stock of furnishing goods showing to great advantage; and so with the other places where the light was in operation. After the light had been in operation about an hour, it was found necessary to shut it off, owing to caused a very unsteady and uneven flow of electricity. This will be remedied during the day, and the light again tested this evening. Those who have it in their stores speak in high terms of their satisfaction, and we are of the opinion that after this test, it will not be unlike a good system of water works-once in use, always used. The light is known as the arc electric light, and is the Weston patent, towned by the United States electric

Stafford as Shylock.

Next Monday evening William Stafford and his excellent support will give the Janesville people the Merchant of Yen* ice, Mr. Stafford acting Shylock. In regard to his ability to act this part, we take from the Brooklyn Times the following criticism: "Mr. Stafford, as Shylock, gives evidence of even a greater degree of talent than he gained credit for as Claude Melnotte. His impersonation of the crafty old Jew was an excellent one and would compare favorably with that of the best exponents of the part. His gestures are correct and scholarly and his facial expressions suggestive of the persion with which he is imbued. The quick change from the father mourning the loss of his daughter to the miser bewailing the loss of his gold, was admirably portrayed and stamped Mr. Stafford as an

The Illuminations by this Light last, The Testimony on the Part of the State All In-The Defense-Re-Shortly after seven o'clock last evening, marks of A. B. R. Butler, Attroney for the Defense. the illuminations by the electric light in

The following is a synopsis of the re marks of A. R. R. Butler, one of the atfrom those who witnessed it. Owing to torneys for the defense, at the opening of the hurry to get the light in operation court this morning. Mr. Butler said in substance: We have reached the point in the case where it is our duty to state to you our this duty with trembling, absolutely oppressed by the weight of responsibility that rests upon me. A young man, a fine looking man, is charged with the crime

gentlemen, we must all remember through the case, that he is innocent until proven guilty; and each and every one of us is bound to give him this shield of protection. Let us, then, take store; one in the drugetore of Prentice & our stand on this ground. It is a fearful thing to be charged with the crime of murder; and some men have been punished when innocent, and we are cautioned by past experience to be watchful lest we go astray. In the light of rules of law which will be given you by the court, you will decide this case. I was retained in the case early after the homicide; my associate a little later; I entered upon this case reluctantly, for I had retired from active practice; but the mother of this boy came to me, and entreated me to defend him: so I have entered the case, and will do my duty as a lawyer, and then leave the rest to you I went to Racine soon after this occurrence, and expected that I could find the report of the testimony taken at the in quest. I will do Mr. Cooper the justice to say that he would do anything for me personally, but for some reason he hesitated to give me the information I wanted. I stated to them that it was a public record, and as counsel of the defendant I had a right to see it. He acted as though he was afraid some one was watching to see if anything should be done to help the defendant. I failed, utterly failed, to find out on what charge my client was held. I make these remarks about these Racine officers, not from any personal feeling against these officers, but to show you that they have not treated the defendant fairly. We came to the examination, and I then again asked to see the report of the coroner's inquest, but I was kindly refused. It burt me to find that a man charged with a high crime, should not be permitted to see what the charge rested upon. At the time the examination was first called, the state put it off on the ground that one of the witnesses was absent; that witness, I believe, was B. L. Lewis; this I will show you after I take my seat by evidence. We shall attempt to show that before the examination some agent of the state saw this witness and found out what he knew of the case and he informed the state, and he was told that he was not wanted here on the part of the state, that he was worth $500 to the defence, but nothing to the state. We found that two of the witnesses for the state would not be sworn, Doian and Gressing, the court knew what passed between the attorneys on both sides, the reason why we feared the reason they would not be sworn because the testimony would largely tend to prove the innocense of the defendant. The fact, if it be a fact, that the deceased and the defendant were addicted to the vice of gambling, the life of a gambler is as much outitled to protection as the life of any other man. Because a man is a gambler he should not for that reason be shot. On the other hand, if the defendant were a gambler be should not for that reason be convicted, he is a man the same as we are. God forbid that I should say anything but in this way of explanation > life of Captain Pagh. Our defense, gentlemen, rosts mostly in the evidence of the witnesses for the state, all our witnesses but one are residents of Racine. I will say to you frankly that on the evidence offered by the state you shall acquit the defendant, that it became necessary, or apparently necessary, and that such killing was justified. Tonnicliffe, Ketchum, Tory, Dietrich, Dolan and Gressing are the witnesses as to the homicide and on their evidence we claim justification.

In conclusion he said that Clifford was small man, weak from his birth; and that he was no match for Captain Pugh (who was a large, strong and muscular man, weighing upwards of two hundred pounds) in a personal encounter, and that the defendant was justified in shooting him; that he (Butler) would have shot before the defendant did; and that the jury ought to acquit the prisoner.

The first witness for the defense was Deputy Sheriff Spitzman, of Racine, who testified to finding a watch chain on the prisoner, broken in the encounter with Captain Pugh.

Ed. Simpson, Clifford's "partner," who held the money bot by Pugh, said, when asked his business, that he was a "sporting man;" and when questioned further, he appealed to the counsel for defendant to know if he was obliged to answer that. The countt said he thought he had made sufficient answer. Simpson told a very straightforward story of the occurrences before the shooting. The feature of his testimony was that he re-
